Subject: Submission of my manuscript for final review Dear PRB:

On November 23, 2015 the PRB tentatively approved my manuscript (then with a working title of "Interrogating the Enemy.") Since that time the draft manuscript has been in the hands of the publisher who requested a limited number of modest editorial changes to the text.

Per your request - attached is a PDF version of the final manuscript as it will appear when published. For your convenience, I have also attached a MS Word document in "track change" mode that will make it easier for you to identify those places where the previously cleared text was modified. In one of two places I have moved some text from one part of the manuscript to another. Most of the other changes are cosmetic or simply to enhance the readability of the text or comply with the publisher's style on spelling, punctuation etc.

I have also added an acknowledgments section which I could only write at the end of the process when I knew who needed to be thanked. Also attached is a separate document that is the index.

I know your workload is quite heavy but I think the track change document will make it easy for your staff to assure themselves that no classified material has been added to the manuscript.

I look forward to completion of the final review.
